Fish Oil Position Paper – New

“recommendation” revision Feb. 2006

- Antonella, PMRI Staff RD for Dr. Ornish was present to provide rationale and discussion regarding omega-3 recommendations and differences.
- Dr. Ornish has decided it is more clear and simple to continue recommending 3 grams of omega-3 fatty acids/day via fish oil capsules, which, with most supplements, amounts to approximately 1,000 mg of EPA+DHA (in accordance with the AHA recommendation).
- Dr. Ornish has also decided that the recommendation should be consistent for both men and women. Because omega-3 fatty acids from fish oil are more bio-available than those from flaxseed. Women are to take 3 grams of fish oil capsules (no cholesterol) and eliminate flax recommendation.

- There are no contraindications for female participants to continue taking flaxseed supplements until their capsule supply is used up.
- Fish oil supplements should be cholesterol-free. Cholesterol free is defined as : less than 2 milligrams (mg) and 2 g or less of saturated fat per serving. Source: <http://www.cfsan.fda.gov/~dms/fdheart.html> (toward the bottom of the web page).

BY MAX WEAVER:

Any other tea lovers out there? After lots of scrounging around, I found a few things that I think are good.

Celestial Seasonings makes a "Caffeine-Free

Tea"--an herb tea--that tastes much like black tea; it contains "natural tea flavors" but no caffeine. The Celestial Seasonings line is pretty widely available in both health food stores and regular grocery stores. Several of our old group drinks it.

Anyone who read Alexander McCall Smith's "The No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency," set in Botswana, will remember the characters sitting around drinking "bush tea." This tea is made of rooibos leaf and is naturally uncaffeinated. It doesn't taste like Chinese tea, but has a spicy flavor that I've developed a taste for. The Republic of Tea markets it as "Red Tea." Anyone who likes chai will probably like Yogi Tea's "Redbush Chai," which with Splenda and non-fat half and half is a real winter treat. Happy sipping!
